

Letter to John Barton, Chairman of easyJet

Dear Mr Barton,

Forgive me writing to you at your home address but I appear to be getting nowhere by writing to Hangar 89 at Luton Airport. My first effort was sent to 'Customer Services' on the 4th June, my second (on rather fetching orange notepaper) was addressed to you direct on the 24th June – they are both attached. These were serious issues that I was addressing – to have them completely ignored is just outrageous, and very poor manners indeed.

Please give these letters your attention. I would prefer a written response but I suppose you could send me an email.

I gave up my membership at Sunningdale when they doubled the subscription to £60 a year and put Brut deodorant in the changing rooms. Swinley is now where I play most of my rubbish golf but I have been a member down at Sandwich for 41 years.

Awaiting your response to the terrorist peril at Luton and to easyJet's data protection policy,

Yours sincerely,

Jamie Summers
